

The Service Set

Music Charms This Admiral

By Winzola McLendon
Washington Post Staff Writer

Some high ranking military officers unwind after a hard day's work with a fast game of hand ball at the Pentagon gym, others read who-did-it.

But Adm. William Raborn Jr. who heads the Central Intelligence Agency chooses a more aesthetic method. Mrs. McLendon

He plays the piano or organ and plays both well. The Admiral comes of a musical family — everyone sings and plays — and when he can find time from pressing cloak-and-dagger business, "Red" Raborn drives up to New Jersey to take a few brush-up lessons on the piano and organ from his sister, Beth.

Beth is a singer-pianist at the Jersey Steak Pit (according to the Admiral, "a super supper club") near Wyckoff, and her brother-pupil says she's the greatest.

FOIAb3b1

CPYRGHT

CPYRGHT